Asked by giraff on ux.stackexchange.com, answered by Philip Seyfi.
The end-user is a tricky term which has a variety of meanings depending on when and where it's used. Whereas in economics the end-user is the person who uses the product, in contracts this term usually refers to the non-reseller, who does not necessarily consume the product at all. For example, if Cheesecake Inc. sells cookies to your grandmother, who then brings them to you, and... Full answer
